

Abstract

This application provides an invention of a molded product comprising a carbonaceous material having a carbon content of 30 to 70 mass% obtained by dry distillation of solidified refuse fuels and a binder. Since the molded product can be utilized as an environment cleaning material such as for foul water cleaning as it is or after processing, it can provide a stage of effectively utilizing refuses and promote consumption thereof.